Portfolio Manager Commentary

The Eswatini equity market remained unchanged in March and as a result is also unchanged for the first quarter of 2022. The lack of liquidity in the equity market continues to be a dampener on returns. However, on a relative basis to global developed equities (the MSCI World Index), the local market outperformed.

Despite this, investors continue to see real returns in the credit market. Although there were no government bond auctions in the month, yields on offer in the fixed income space remain an attractive option. The yields at the most recent auction averaged 8.75%, 9.5%, 9.75% and 10.5% for the 3, 5, 7 and 10 year issues respectively. Further to this, the corporate credit market remains fairly active with respect to listed notes and private placements.

Yields in the money markets rose over the course of the month in spite of reasonable levels of liquidity. This was partly due to the Central Bank exercising the greenshoe option on most issues when liquidity allowed. The yield on the 91 day issue ended the month at 5.4%.

On the data front, the latest inflation print in Eswatini declined to 3.3%. On the back of this, the Monetary Policy Consultative Committee (MPCC) made the decision to leave rates unchanged. While the decision makes sense given the reported inflation backdrop, it is somewhat surprising as the Monetary Policy Committee (MPC) in South Africa (SA) had raised rates 25bps a day earlier. This leaves a 25bps rate differential between Eswatini and SA.

Looking regionally, the SA equity market gained +1.35% with a major boost coming from the financial sector, up +11.99%. Returns from most other sectors were negligible, apart from the listed property sector which rose +5.1%. Industrials lagged, pulling the main index down -4.3%. The rand (and emalangen) appreciated substantially over the course of the month, +5.2%, to end 14.6/USD.
